Dear Hiring Team,

Most brands create content. Few build systems that make content consistently work. In my experience, the difference between a brand that grows and one that posts into silence is never talent - it's infrastructure. That's what I specialize in.

Over the past two years, I've built and run content operations for organizations across different industries - a Web3 protocol, a health advocacy nonprofit, and a national youth program. At Delabz, I redesigned the entire content system from scratch, and within 90 days cross-platform engagement had climbed 62%. At Just Breathe Asthma Foundation, a structured approach to educational storytelling drove a 45% increase in monthly reach - without a single naira in ad spend. These were not lucky months; they were the result of data-informed content calendars, consistent brand voice, and relentless optimization.

What draws me to Klinserv is the breadth of impact your team creates for businesses across sectors. A role that demands both content creativity and digital marketing strategy is exactly where I thrive - I am equally comfortable writing a compelling brand narrative as I am reading analytics to figure out why it underperformed and what to do next. My toolkit covers social media management, copywriting, Canva, CapCut, Meta Business Suite, and X Analytics, and I bring hands-on experience managing communities and driving measurable retention.

I'd love to bring this combination of creative execution and growth thinking to your team. I'm available for a conversation at your earliest convenience.

Warm regards,

Caleb Aghedo

Darlings Lounge Enterprise — Social Media Manager (Fashion / Fabric Brand)

Salary: N150,000-N200,000/month - NEGOTIATE to N220,000-N250,000

Location: Lagos (Onsite)

Score: 3.5/5 - Grade B - Apply Now

Apply at: myjobmag.com/job/social-media-manager-darlings-lounge-enterprise

Email subject: Application: Social Media Manager - Caleb Aghedo

WARNING: Salary negotiation tip: If offered N150k, counter with N220k-N250k. Settle at N200k minimum.

Dear Hiring Team,

There's a specific kind of trust that luxury fabric brands have to earn online - the kind where a customer sees a Reel of lace draping across a bolt of fabric and already knows, before they've asked the price, that this is what they want. That emotional conversion does not happen by accident. It's crafted.

I've spent the last two years doing exactly that work - turning complex ideas and products into content that moves people. At Delabz, I created protocol breakdowns and founder narratives that made a Web3 brand feel human and compelling, growing cross-platform engagement by 62% in 90 days. For Just Breathe Asthma Foundation, emotionally intelligent storytelling around health advocacy lifted monthly reach by 45%. The through-line in every case: understanding the audience's emotional state before writing a single caption.

For a brand like Darlings Lounge - where the product is luxury, tactile, and highly visual - the social media challenge is not volume, it's atmosphere. Instagram Reels that show fabric movement, Stories that feel like a personal shopping experience, captions that communicate quality without screaming it. I'm fluent in these formats. I work natively in Canva, CapCut, and Instagram's creator tools, and I understand how to build a content calendar that maintains consistent brand elevation rather than chasing trends that do not fit.

I would love to bring this sensibility to your brand. Available for a call or portfolio review at your convenience.

Warm regards,

Caleb Aghedo

Elvaridah — Social Media Manager / Content Creator

Salary: Not stated - confirm before sending full letter

Location: Lagos (Onsite)

Score: 3.4/5 - Grade C - Ask salary first

Apply at: Email: careers@elvaridah.com

Email subject: Application: Social Media Manager / Content Creator - Caleb Aghedo

WARNING: IMPORTANT: Send a short salary-check email first. Only send this letter if confirmed salary is N200,000+.

Dear Hiring Team,

Elvaridah's work is precisely where content and business growth intersect - helping companies start, differentiate, and scale. That's a context where social media cannot just look good; it has to work. And working means building systems, not just posting content.

In my current role at Delabz, I did not inherit a content system - I built one. I mapped out content pillars, designed a cross-platform calendar, established a posting rhythm, and created templates that kept quality consistent without making every post a production. Within 90 days, engagement had climbed 62% across platforms. At GILD Members, I applied the same thinking to community management: structured moderation, weekly analytics reviews, and proactive engagement that raised member retention by 40%. These results came from treating social media as infrastructure, not just communication.

What draws me to Elvaridah specifically is the diversity of businesses your team serves. Managing social media for clients across different industries means constantly adapting tone, content style, and strategy - which is exactly the kind of challenge that keeps this work sharp. I have direct experience with that adaptability: I've run social media for a tech/Web3 brand, a health nonprofit, and a national student organization simultaneously, each requiring a completely different content approach.

I'd welcome the chance to discuss how I can contribute to Elvaridah's client work. Looking forward to hearing from you.

Warm regards,

Caleb Aghedo

Undisclosed Company — West Africa Role — Digital & Media Manager - West Africa (Nigeria & Ghana)

Salary: Not stated - confirm on Jobberman

Location: Lagos (Onsite)

Score: 3.2/5 - Grade C - Confirm company first

Apply at: jobberman.com/listings/digital-media-manager-west-africa-nigeriaghana-x8608v

Email subject: Application: Digital & Media Manager - West Africa - Caleb Aghedo

WARNING: Visit Jobberman link first to get company name. Replace [Company Name] in letter before sending.

Dear Hiring Team,

Managing digital presence across Nigeria and Ghana means operating in two distinct market cultures while maintaining one coherent brand voice. It's a challenge that rewards people who think in systems, not just campaigns - and it's exactly the kind of complexity I find most energizing.

My background sits at the intersection of content strategy, digital execution, and community management. At Delabz, I ran a multi-platform content operation across X, LinkedIn, and community channels - building the editorial calendar, managing daily execution, and tracking performance metrics to continuously refine what worked. The result was a 62% increase in cross-platform engagement within the first 90 days. At GILD Members, I extended that thinking into community platforms, using analytics to identify drop-off points and restructuring the engagement strategy until retention climbed by 40%. I've also led national digital campaigns at The Emerge Club, coordinating content across multiple chapters to drive a 30% improvement in student participation - teaching me how to maintain brand consistency across geographically dispersed audiences.

A West Africa regional role requires someone who can brief creators clearly, read performance data honestly, and adapt quickly when a market responds differently than expected. I bring the analytical discipline and execution track record to do that effectively - and the cultural fluency to do it authentically across both the Nigerian and Ghanaian contexts.

I would welcome the opportunity to discuss how my experience can support your West Africa digital strategy. Available at your convenience.

Warm regards,
Caleb Aghedo

Patchstack — Social Media Manager (International Remote - USD)

Salary: Estimated $1,500-$2,500 USD/month

Location: Fully Remote (Worldwide)

Score: 3.1/5 - Grade C - Confirm Nigeria accepted first

Apply at: weworkremotely.com/remote-jobs/patchstack-social-media-manager

Email subject: Application: Social Media Manager - Caleb Aghedo (Lagos, Nigeria)

WARNING: Confirm they accept Nigeria-based applicants before applying. Quote $1,500-$2,000/month if asked for salary expectations.

Dear Hiring Team,

The WordPress security community is technical by necessity and skeptical by instinct. Earning trust in that space requires content that does not oversell - it educates, demonstrates, and lets results speak. That's a content discipline I find genuinely compelling.

I've spent the past two years building social media operations for organizations where the subject matter required translation: a Web3 protocol (Delabz) where I had to make blockchain concepts accessible and engaging for a broader audience, and a health advocacy nonprofit (Just Breathe Asthma Foundation) where trust was the only currency that mattered. At Delabz, taking complex technical narratives and reshaping them into content that resonated drove a 62% lift in cross-platform engagement in 90 days. At Just Breathe, an education-led content strategy - no scare tactics, just clear information - grew monthly reach by 45%. Both taught me that the hardest audiences to win are the most valuable ones, and that winning them requires patience, specificity, and genuine subject matter respect.

Patchstack's positioning - community-led security intelligence for WordPress developers - is a content story worth telling well. I'd bring the same approach I used in technical content: lead with the insight, not the pitch; build consistency before chasing virality; and measure what actually indicates trust, not just reach.

Based in Lagos (WAT, UTC+1), I'm available across European working hours. I'd love to discuss how I can help grow Patchstack's presence beyond its current audience.

Warm regards,

Caleb Aghedo
